

Welcome to WHERE'S
NICK...

Acknowledgement of Country

Where's Nick is based in Bulanaming, on Gadigal Land.

We acknowledge the traditional custodians of this land, the Gadigal People of the Eora Nation.

We recognise that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples hold knowledge about connection to Country – land, sky and water – that has been practised for thousands of generations. Their cultures and customs have nurtured, and continue to nurture this land.

We pay our respects to Elders past, present and emerging.

Sovereignty was never ceded.

Drink Wine

The world is full of interesting wines; here is our collection

Some things that are important:

Accessibility and generosity. Wine should not be wielded as a tool for exclusion or elitism.

Supporting small producers and growers. To this end, the vast majority of our spirits, amari, beers and so on are independently owned. They be unfamiliar to you, but are worth discovering and celebrating.

Sustainability in farming. Many of the producers listed here have chosen to certify as organic or biodynamic, and we have noted it accordingly. Others may be in conversion, and others still may choose to pave their own way forward, independent of regulatory bodies. All of them hold our values, and are working towards them in the way they believe is most appropriate.

Minimal intervention winemaking. What this looks like will vary from producer to producer. Most will use native yeasts and will not fine or filter. Some will add sulphur at bottling, others will refuse. All have worked hard to ensure that as little as possible stands between you, and the natural expression of the grape and its terroir. We value transparency over dogma, and as such, will note if and when a wine is made with zero additions but we not purport that this is the best and only way.

Challenging expectations. Wine should surprise and delight, so leave your assumptions (and ego) at the door. If you're in need of guidance, just ask.

Aperitivo

Sherry and friends 60ml unless otherwise stated

Drink more sherry.

If words like 'salty' and 'savory' make your heart sing, then look no further. Sherry has been waiting for you. For over 200 years it's been quietly maturing in the sun-drenched bodegas of Spain. Waiting for you to realise that Sherry is not just a drink, but an experience, a lifestyle, a dream, a glorious revelation.

If you're looking for sweet styles (also delicious, we thoroughly approve) you can find them on page 63

Manzanilla and Fino

Not your grandma's sherry, unless your grandma is a certified style icon.
Light, crisp, sea breeze satisfaction.

Bubbles

Pétillant Naturel | Méthode Ancestrale | Pét-Nat

Fun fizz for friends and first dates. Sparkling wine made by bottling partially fermented grape juice. The fermentation continues, the carbon dioxide is trapped and the finished wine is fizzy. These sparklings are often defined by their fruit (and funk), and have varying levels of sweetness.

NV	Meredith 'Little Lie Down' Pét-Nat * ° New South Wales / Hannah Hemmings	85
2023	Werkstatt Pétillant Naturel Riesling Mount Gambier, South Australia / Bridget Mac	85
2022	Bryterlater 'Petina' Pinot Noir Canterbury, New Zealand / James Graves Opie & Liz Opie	100
2019	Vincent Carême 'Plaisir Ancestral' Vouvray ~ * Loire, France / Vincent & Tania Carême	120

Traditional Method

Elegant fizz for special occasions. Central to this style is a secondary fermentation in bottle. These sparklings are made by adding finished, still wine to the bottle along with sugar and yeast, or grape must. The yeast feeds on the sugar, and the resulting carbon dioxide is trapped. Typically speaking, these wines have more complexity and a finer bead.

2022	Emmalene Sparkling Pinot Noir Rosé * Adelaide Hills, South Australia / Tim Bartsch & Mark Bulman	70
2021	Quealy 'Splendido' Mornington Peninsula, Victoria / Quealy Family	80

Bubbles

Champagne

Serious stuff here. The pinnacle of traditional method sparkling, these wines remain unrivalled in power & complexity. Key to the style is the extended lees ageing – rich, biscuity notes evolve to counter searing acidity and chalky texture

A love letter to Friuli

It's no wonder Friuli is a bit of an outsider in Italy. Slovenian, Austrian and Venetian cultures all vie for influence, and Friuli takes what it likes and goes its own way. What's often lamented as an identity crisis – too many grapes! too many styles! – is, in fact just the opposite; a region that embraces diversity as its cornerstone, with a foot in the past and an eye on the future.

We've included some contemporary examples in this selection – winemakers who, like their Friulian counterparts, blend tradition with invention and put character before conformity.

A love letter to Friuli

One of the pioneering regions for skin-contact wines, Friuli has a long tradition of using extended maceration to build texture and complexity. These wines show the style at its most compelling.

A love letter to Friuli

Damijan Podversic

Under the mentorship of Josko Gravner, Damijan Podversic honed his philosophy of organic farming, minimal intervention, and long maceration periods, becoming one of Friuli's most respected winemakers. His wines, fermented with native yeasts and aged in large Slavonian oak barrels, embody the raw power and elegance that define great skin contact wines.

Today, his daughter Tamara works alongside him, bringing a new perspective while staying true to the family's ethos. Her persistence, and capacity to coax, bully, and challenge her father into trying new methods, ensures the Podversic legacy continues to evolve while maintaining its deep connection to Friuli's terroir.

Marco de Jerez

The last couple of decades haven't been so kind to El Marco and its champion. Crushed under the weight of industrial-scale production, poor little Palomino was dismissed as nothing more than a blank canvas for mass-market wine.

Today though, a new generation of winemakers is breathing life back into the region. They're digging through old diaries for secrets long thought lost and restoring gnarly vineyards row by dusty row. The wines they're crafting have character – cereal-fruited, sencia-laden styles that speak of chalky albariza and rich, marzipan-laced bottlings that celebrate the role of the Bodega. If you're intrigued about this region (and you should be) we recommend exploring the Sherry collection on page 4 next.

Vin Jaune

These wines are made from Savagnin and are left to age in barrel for 60 months underneath a veil, or 'voile' of yeast. This process transforms the wine into something rich, nutty and deeply savoury. Perfect winter whites.

White Rhone and beyond – beautiful hedonism

If you're after bright acidity and lean precision, there are other regions we will point you to. The below selection is all about generosity. Lush fruit, indulgent layers, voluptuous shapes and waxy grip. There's plenty of balance, but texture reigns supreme over needlepoint finesse.

Skin Contact or 'Orange' Wine

The old skin contact eh? What's it all about?

These wines are made by fermenting white grapes in contact with their skins – extracting colour, tannin and aromatics in the process. Depending on the grape, the length of time on skins, and the fermentation vessel, these wines may be white, orange, pink or anything in between. They range from lightly textured examples to full bodied, tannic beasts.

Fortifieds

Mistelles 45ml

Fruit Juice + Booze = A mellow, fruity tippie of moderate sweetness

These vary from region to region, depending on the local speciality. And so, in Normandy you will find them made with apple juice and calvados, whereas a region known for it's grapes, like Champagne, will use those instead.

Forgotten Fortifieds

Marco de Bartoli

When Marsala had all but lost its soul to industrialisation, Marco De Bartoli set up in a fortified farmhouse outside the city and chose a different path – one that favoured tradition, transparency, and time. He began by collecting barrels of Grillo from growers working old limestone soils, laying the foundations for his perpetual solera and creating wines that speak of time, place, and stubborn conviction.

While the world may have forgotten this singular style, left to linger in kitchen cupboards and memory, De Bartoli's quiet defiance helped inspire a generation of winemakers in this little corner of Sicily. His wines remain singular: patient, honest, and fiercely rooted in place.

Digestives

Also known as tummy settlers, digestives are a crucial component of any balanced evening. Essentially medicinal, they form the backbone of civilised society.

Amari 45ml

The undisputed champion of digestives, amari are a class of bitter Italian liqueurs infused with a variety of botanicals. They range in sweetness, with the bitter element often deriving from citrus, wood, herbs, or spices. While many amari feature a combination of these ingredients, we've curated the selection below to highlight the dominant characteristic.

Spotlight on Chateau de Laubade

Tucked away in the famed Bas-Armagnac region, this family-owned château has been crafting Armagnac since 1870. Every bottle begins with estate-grown fruit and is aged in barrels made on site, hewn from oak trees grown in the château's own forests. Château de Laubade is the only producer in Armagnac with a resident cooper, and one of the few with access to black Gascony oak – a rare wood that plays a vital role in shaping the rich, rancio character of the region's finest spirits.

Spotlight on Michel Courvreur

Technically not Scottish, and not entirely French, the Michel Courvreur collection is driven by the conviction that the maturation conditions maketh the whisky. Single malt grain spirit is brought across from Scotland in its youth, and aged in old sherry and sauternes barrels in a cave in the heart of Burgundy – the conditions of which produce whiskies of exceptional quality.

Spotlight on Belgrove Hill

Few people do things quite the way Peter Bignell does. A sixth generation farmer with a background in ice and sand sculpting, he found himself left with a surplus of rye after a bumper harvest one year in Tasmania. Driven by his loathing of unnecessary waste, he went out, bought a welder, and built his own distillery out of repurposed machinery. An old dryer is used to smoke the grain, and the entire operation is powered by bio-diesel, using cooking oil from a neighbouring roadhouse. One of the few 'grower' distilleries in the world, Belgrove Hill is surely one of the greenest too.
