History of mankind and that of wine have always been intertwined.
Its fortune just followed the fortunes of the humans.

When deciding on how to present our wine offering we looked at several different options.

The historical element of wine really appealed to us, and we decided to use it as a medium to share some of the lesser known aspects of wine, by following the historical journey that wine has gone through.

We have therefore selected many wines from Georgia, Armenia and Turkey that have previously not been available in the UK. We also have a small but excellent selection of wines from the viticultural giants of France and Italy. Germany and Austria make a real appearance too.

We took the earliest mention of viti-viniculture when indicating the start of wine making in any given area.

In addition, we have decided to share an offering of wines that are both more challenging as well as wines that are considered as classics. We have used symbols to indicate some of the styles on our list.

We also would like to thank Patrick E McGovern in helping us with the dates on our vinicultural chronology.

Sparkling Wine

Sparkling wines hold a special place in the world of wine, evoking a sense of celebration in us as we see a glass poured or hear the sound of bottles opened. Our selection of sparkling wines will cover a variety of styles from Prosecco to Cap Classique as well as the small independent growers from Champagne. We are also very keen on sparkling wines from England whose quality has grown immensely in the last few decades

The first wine in the history was most likely made somewhere where Armenia, Turkey, Georgia is situated. The wine grape Vitis Vinifera can be found growing wild in these countries. The plethora of indigenous varieties with exotic names and undiscovered range of taste and aroma is a rich treasure trove of discovery. We are very excited that we have the opportunity to share our discoveries of a unique range of wines. The practice of making wine in clay pots belongs firmly to Georgia and Armenia called Qvevri and Karasi respectively. Turkey with over 1000 indigenous grape varieties is a country with an incredible potential.

Wine was most likely brought down to these lands from uplands in Mesopotamia, as a commodity. Amphoras found in these areas indicates a presence of commerce in wine as the sources of the amphoras points to different areas. Today wine made here is mostly made from international varieties with Lebanon possibly leading the pack.

Wine in Greece is going through a quality boom and with its many grape varieties, styles and beautiful vineyards, it was only matter of time before the rest of the world woke up to these wines. With its searing acidity, Assyrtiko is Greece`s answer to Chablis or a dry riesling, Xinomavro makes red wines that wouldn`t be too far away from a great Barolo. These are to name just a couple of names amongst many varieties.

There are very few if any country in the world where wine is such a strong part of life. Italian wines we like are made to be drunk with food and compliment one another. One can not really separate food and wine in Italian culture at all. Italy offers a unique set of flavour and as one travels from north to south as the scenery changes so do the grape varieties and flavours.

A U S T R A L I A

Australian wine is no stranger to the UK palates. Gregory Blaxland was the first Australian to export the wines he made in NSW in to the UK. A lot has changed since. Australia is a diverse country/continent with many different styles of wines. In particular Victoria produces wines that can actually provide an entire wine list to a restaurant. Not many wine regions can claim this.
