RHEINGAU

J.B Becker in Walluf

Since Hans-Joseph Becker grandfather started the winery 1893 the filosofi has always been "Wine needs time" That means a lot of work in the vineyards. It means wild-yeast fermentation in the cellar and that all the wines have a long time on the yeast and have no filtration. This gives harmony to the wines and make them last and develop for a very long time in the bottle. Hans-Joseph, nickname Hajo studied oenologi in Geisenheim and then was assistant winemaker at Schloss Eltz, a Rheingau winery that made epic wines at that time. During this time Hajo started to try dry rieslingjuice direct from the cask before any Süsreserve was added and he fell in love with this pure wine. He took over his fathers winery 1971 and started to focus on bone dry Riesling. Of course he lost all his costumers.. But Hajo did not abandon his odd winestyle and we thank the winegods for that! It took almost 50 years but today J.B Beckers wines are starting to get recognized for the great wines they are.

J.Neus in Ingelheim am Rhein

This estate was founded in 1881 by Josef Neus. Ingelheim was back then world famous for their redwines and J.Neus became one of the masterminds in the region. J.Neus even developed their own Pinot noir clone which other german top wineries started to use. But nothing last forever. After two World wars the fine winemaking in Ingelheim was forgotten

The winery was reborn 2012 when family Schmitz from Mainz bought the estate and decided to make Ingelheim world famous again. Cool climate, Limestone soils and old vines together with excellent winemaking skills.. Will they succeed? Egon&Gösen thinks so ☺
