CHAMPAGNE

Champagne is a sparkling wine produced from grapes grown in the Champagne region of France following rules that demand secondary fermentation of the wine in the bottle to create carbonation. Some use the term 'Champagne' as a generic term for sparkling wine, but many countries reserve the term exclusively for sparkling wines that come from Champagne and are produced under the rules of the appellation.

The primary grapes used in the production of Champagne are Pinot Noir, Chardonnay and Pinot Meunier. Champagne appellation law only allows grapes grown according to appellation rules in specifically designated plots within the appellation to be used in the production of Champagne. Some sparkling wines produced in other regions of the world use other grapes.

In the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries, royalty from around Europe spread the message of the unique sparkling wine from Champagne and its association with luxury and power. The leading manufacturers devoted considerable energy to creating a history and identity for their wine, associating it and themselves with nobility and royalty. Through advertising and packaging they sought to associate Champagne with high luxury, festivities and rites of passage. Their efforts coincided with the emergence of a middle class that was looking for ways to spend its money on symbols of upward mobility.

POL ROGER

Champagne Pol Roger was founded 1849 and is a notable producer of Champagne. The brand is still owned and run by the descendants of Pol Roger. Based around the town of Épernay in the Champagne region, the house annually produces around 110,000 cases of the sparkling wine.

The owners of Pol Roger are members of the Primus Familiae Vini. Pol Roger holds the current Royal Warrant as purveyors of Champagne to Queen Elizabeth II

Pol Roger was the favourite Champagne of Sir Winston Churchill. After Churchill's death in 1965, Pol Roger placed a black border around the labels of Brut NV shipped to the United Kingdom. In 1984, they introduced the Pinot Noir dominant Cuvée Sir Winston Churchill. The first vintage of this cuvée (the one introduced in 1984) was the 1975, only released in magnum format.

Cuvée Sir Winston Churchill replaced the Pol Roger P.R. Reserve Speciale at the top of the range. First released with the 1971 vintage, it continued to be produced alongside Cuvée Sir Winston Churchill until the 1988 vintage. Its production was terminated as Pol Roger felt no need to have two competing prestige cuvées.

TAITTINGER

Taittinger remains one of the few Champagne Houses to remain owned and actively managed by the family named on the label.

Its origins date back to 1734 when the original house was founded by Jacques Fourneaux. The Taittinger link was established in 1931 when Pierre Taittinger, the founder of today's company acquired the house.

The hallmark of Taittinger Champagnes is the high percentage of Chardonnay used in their winemaking, which can be anything from 40% in the Brut Réserve Non Vintage to 100% in the prestigious Comtes de Champagne Blanc de Blancs. This Chardonnay dominance provides for a style of elegance, delicacy and finesse which is recognized worldwide and has earned the house many accolades and awards over the years.

It is one of the last houses to be run by a member of its founding family, and Charles Philipponnat is a true Champenois who descends from winemakers, years.

Until Krug's Clos des Mesnil was first produced in 1979, Clos des Goisses was the region's only great single-vineyard wine. From its first vintage in 1935, it was not only unchallenged as the beacon of terroir in Champagne, it was the sole argument that great Champagne could be made from a single site, rather than a blend of vineyards as had been done for centuries in the region.

LOUIS ROEDERER

Initially founded as Dubois Père & Fils in 1776, Louis Roederer inherited the company from his uncle in 1833, renamed it eponymously, and set out to target markets abroad. With concentrated efforts in several countries, including Russia. Tsar Nicholas II named Louis Roederer as the official wine supplier to the Imperial Court of Russia. Although the Russian Revolution and Prohibition in the US caused financial difficulties during the early 20th century, Roederer was re-established as a leading Grandes Marques producer and remains in the ownership of descendants of Rouzaud. Cristal is a precursor prestige cuvée brand and was made commercially available in 1945.

ANDRÉ CLOUET

Clouet family has a history of accomplishment in the region. The family owns 8 hectares of vines in preferred mid-slope vineyards in Grand Crus Bouzy and Ambonnay and has excelled as a Pinot Noir specialist even within Bouzy, an appellation specifically celebrated for the quality of its Pinot Noir. The wines are cellared under the family's 17th century village house – built by an ancestor who acted as printer to Louis XV's royal court at Versailles. Respect for terroir is evident in these traditionally crafted wines, offering an expansive, historically reflective expression of the appellation.

CHAMPAGNE LAURENT-PERRIER

The House of Laurent-Perrier was founded in 1812 by André Michel Pierlot and took the name Vve Laurent-Perrier when Mathilde Emilie Perrier, the widow of Eugène Laurent, combined the two family names after she decided to expand the business.

Eugénie Hortense Laurent, her daughter, inherited the House in 1925 and sold it to Marie-Louise Lanson de Nonancourt in 1939.

In 1939, Marie-Louise de Nonancourt, widow and mother of four children, mindful of their future, acquired the Domaine Laurent-Perrier.

During WWII, Marie-Louise Lanson de Nonancourt ran the business while two of her sons, Maurice and Bernard, joined the French Resistance. In 1945, Bernard de Nonancourt began an exacting apprenticeship, learning every aspect of winemaking from vine to cellar, before his appointment in October 1948 as Chairman and Chief Executive. At that point, the House was employing around 20 people and shipping 80,000 bottles a year.

KRUG

Joseph Krug was born in 1800 in the German town of Mainz, part of France's Napoleonic empire at the time. Growing up at the heart of the Moselle, he was exposed early on to winegrowing as fragmented as the Champagne region he would one day call home. He became a talented, purposeful young man and spoke three languages.

Setting off at the age of 24 as a trader and commercial traveler, he finally arrived in Paris in 1834. It was an exciting time where he lived in a creative milieu peopled by artists. Dreaming of making his mark in the world of Champagne, Joseph leaped at an opportunity that would eventually lead him to greatness: Joseph Krug was employed by Jacquesson, the leading Champagne house of the time. He quickly became a partner, travelled widely, mixed with the influential, but was far from satisfied.

For him, the essence of Champagne was pleasure, yet variables in the weather could make quality waver dramatically from one year to the next. Joseph dreamed of another way beyond the constraints that compromised Champagne quality.

BOLLINGER

The story began with Athanase de Villermont, the youngest son of a noble family with a brilliant destiny. A great soldier who shone during the American War of Independence, he inherited an extensive estate from his family in the Aÿ area.

He then met Joseph Bollinger, a widely travelled German who had left his country of birth to learn about the Champagne wine trade, and Paul Renaudin, a local man, who was fascinated by the world of wine. The firm of Renaudin-Bollinger & Cie was founded on 6th February 1829.

When Elisabeth Bollinger married Jacques in 1923, she was also to become passionately involved with the House's destiny.

She was only 42 when she lost her husband at the height of the war. Without hesitation and with great dignity she stepped in to take up the torch

JACQUES SELOSSE

The estate was founded by Jacques Selosse and his family in the 1950s, with the first vintage being bottled in 1960. The current proprietor of this estate is Anselme Selosse who took over from his father Jacques in 1980. Anselme studied at the Lycée viticole de Beaune and was one of the first winemakers to apply the winemaking techniques of white Burgundy to Champagne. In 1994, Anselme was named best French Winemaker by Gault Millau.

Jacques Selosse is a grower Champagne, which means the grapes used to produce the wines are grown in vineyards owned by the winery rather than being purchased from other growers, as is the case in most Champagne production. The entire production is grown according to biodynamic principles and Anselme is considered a pioneer of biodynamics in Champagne. Selosse wines are fermented using oak barrels.

Selosse holds 37 acres (15 ha) of vines, predominantly Chardonnay with the remainder Pinot Noir. Around 55,000 bottles are produced each vintage, depending on the conditions.

RUINART

Ruinart is the oldest established Champagne house, exclusively producing Champagne since 1729.

An entrepreneur, Nicolas Ruinart realized the ambitions of his uncle, Dom Thierry Ruinart, to make Ruinart an authentic Champagne house. The house was established in the period immediately following the 1728 edict of Louis XV, which authorised the transport of wine in bottles. Prior to this edict, wine could only be transported in barrels, which made it impossible to send Champagne to distant markets, and confined consumption primarily to its area of production. Nicolas Ruinart founded the House of Ruinart in 1729. The first delivery of "wine with bubbles" went out in January 1730. At first, the sparkling wine was a business gift for cloth purchasers, as Dom Ruinart's brother was a cloth merchant, but six years later Maison Ruinart terminated its cloth selling activities due to success in the Champagne business. Since then, the Maison has kept the standards of excellence of its founders.

In 1882 was one the founders of Syndicat des Grandes Marques. The depression during 1930s nearly drove the house to bankruptcy, but Marie Deutz-Geldermann saved it by investing her whole personal wealth to it.

Little by little Maison Deutz has bought more land and now a bit over third of the grapes comes from their own vineyards and rest from the closely picked contract farmers.

CÉDERIC BOUCHARD

Cedric Bouchard is young, talented and iconoclastic. Although relatively new on the scene (he started his label in 2000), he is already trying to redefine the centuries-old traditions of Champagne by eschewing blending and focusing on single-vineyard, single-varietal, single-vintage wines. Perhaps it was this initiative that earned him the title of Champagne's finest winemaker by the Gault Millau in 2008.

The Montgueux vineyard sites were originally held for the Montrachet of Champagne and are located near the gates of Troyes—the former capital of Champagne.

Emmanuel Lassaigue, Jacques' son who now runs the vineyard has the initial tank or barrel fermentations of all wine and is carried out with only indigenous yeast. He introduces sulfur minimally at pressing to prevent oxidation, and then never adds any sulfur again. Emmanuel disgorges all the bottles by hand himself, a very uncommon practice in Champagne, where machine disgorgement is the norm. JACQUESSON

Jacquesson & Fils is a Champagne producer based in the Dizy region of Champagne. The house was founded in Châlons-sur-Marne in 1798 by Memmie Jacquesson. The house makes the claim it is the oldest independent Champagne house.

The fame of the house grew following the rumour that it was a favourite of Napoleon, who bestowed upon the house a gold medal for its fine cellars. The Champagne house Juglar was absorbed into Jacquesson in 1829. By 1867 annual sales of Jacquesson bottles had reached 1,000,000, but a period of decline followed the death of Adolphe Jacquesson, inventor of the muselet, when the descendants ceased to continue the family business, and ownership changed hands over several decades, until in 1974 when it was bought by Jean Chiquet.

Today it is directed with brothers Jean-Hervé and Laurent Chiquet. Methods have changed to be organic, fermentation in oak is increased, new vineyards are bought in, but production still is limited to app.

DOMAINE RÉNE COLLET

Up until the 1960s the Collet family grew vines mainly to make a little wine for personal consumption. In those days, the great-great-uncle Anthime, who had lost a leg during the 1st World War, just tended a few small plots of vines. From the '60s onwards they planted a lot more vines. However, all the grapes they produced were sold on.

In 1973, a first milestone was reached, with the decision nolongerto sell the grapes, but to produce champagne through a cooperative. René Collet created his own brand of champagne, having noticed the growing demand for champagne from smaller producers.

With the new millennium came a new direction as one after the other, Vincent, Thomas and Florent returned to the family business. In 2002 they decided that they would take over the wine-process from start to finish, aiming to bring out the very best Fontaine-Denis in Côte de Sézanne has to offer.

Before Francis Egly took over the helm in 1982, most of the grapes were sold to negociants.

BURGUNDY

Few vineyards in France or across the world can offer such a diversity of cultural and gastronomic events as the Bourgogne vineyards. The Bourgogne vineyards lie in northeastern France, two hours from Paris and one hour from Lyon, along the main route linking northern Europe to the Mediterranean.

The area enjoys a climate very favourable to the development of white and red wines, renowned for their fineness, distinction, character and the richness of their aromatic expression. Indeed, the Bourgogne has a semi-continental climate with long winters, a mild and relatively rainy spring, and summers often hot, dry and sunny.

Bourgogne has five winegrowing regions: Chablis, Côte de Nuits and Côte de Beaune Côte Chalonnaise and Maconnaise and Beaujolaise

In Bourgogne, two grape varieties dominate the Bourgogne vineyard: Chardonnay and Pinot Noir. There are more white wines than red wines in Bourgogne. Aligoté and Gamay are also part of the main grape varieties grown in Bourgogne. The Bourgogne region is where these grape varieties were originally developed. Clay and limestone soils, commonly found in Bourgogne, enable these grape varieties to express themselves in authentic and unique ways. Chardonnay and Pinot Noir grapes grown in Bourgogne offer unique mineral qualities that cannot be found anywhere else in the world.

DOMAINE STÉPHANE MAGNIEN

The domain is proud to say that for four generations they have not used herbicides, using plowing by horse and tractor to preserve the microbial life of the soil and force the vine's roots to descend more deeply, pulling great typicity from the terroir. "Far from 'vins médiatique' you will find in our bottles a subtle wine, well-structured, respecting the terroir and the vintage, with great length on the palate... all in finesse."

There is a high percentage of old vines in their parcels, including a great deal of "Pinot Tordu," a small-berried, aromatic old clone of Pinot - and there is a superb new cuvée Of Morey-Saint-Denis - the "Grains Fins" made entirely from young vines of Pinot Fin. Minimal new oak is used, normally 10% for the premier and grand cru wines, and the wines are bottled without fining or filtration. Hand harvesting, of course, and long, slow wild-yeast fermentations.

DOMAINE MONGEARD-MUGNERET

The The Mongeard family arrived in Vosne-Romanée in the eighteenth century, with records showing a Mongeard working as vigneron for Domaine de la Romanée-Conti in 1786.

In 1945, Jean Mongeard, whose mother was a Mugneret, found himself making wine at the age of 16 in the place of his father who had died years earlier. The entire 1945 crop was purchased by Baron le Roy, Marquis d'Angerville, and Henri Gouges. Gouges instructed the young Mongeard to personally bottle the wines, rather than sell in barrel.

In 1975, Vincent Mongeard, Jean's son, began working alongside his father and became responsible for viticulture and vinification of the domaine's wines. He persuaded his father to return to the traditional method of bottling, without filtration, filtering only with certain vintages. Jean Mongeard retired in 1995, and Vincent assumed complete leadership of the domaine.

ARMAND ROUSSEAU

Armand Rousseau was born in 1884 to a family heavily involved in the wine industry as merchants, coopers and vigneron. He inherited several vineyard plots and the current domaine building in the village of Gevrey-Chambertin as part of his wedding in 1909.

Armand Rousseau was among the first few producers to bottle his own wine in Burgundy, with the majority of other growers in the region selling their wines to négociant businesses to bottle and sell. Rousseau was also a pioneer within Burgundy in selling his wine to the United States market after the end of prohibition in the mid to late 1930s.

DOMAINE DE LA ROMANÉE-CONTI

In 1232, the Abbey of Saint Vivant in Vosne acquired 1.8 hectares of vineyard. In 1631 it was bought by the de Croonembourg family, who renamed it Romanée for reasons unknown. At the same time, they acquired the adjacent vineyard of La Tâche.

The Romanée-Conti vineyard was bought by Nicolas Defer de la Nouerre, who in 1819 sold it to Julien Ouvrard for 78,000 francs. In 1869 it was bought by Jacques-Marie Duvault-Bloch, who went on to build the domaine we know today with the acquisition of the holdings in Échezeaux, Grands Échezeaux and Richebourg.

The Romanée Saint-Vivant were bought in 1791 by Nicolas-Joseph Marey. The Marey-Monge family sold off part of their holdings to the Latour family in 1898, leased the remaining 5.28 hectares to Domaine de la Romanée-Conti in 1966, and finally sold to the domaine in 1988. This last deal was financed by the sale and leaseback of the domaine's holdings in Échezeaux and some in Grands Échezeaux.

DOMAINE RAVENEAU

François Raveneau established the domaine in 1948 by combining vineyards that he had purchased with vineyards owned by the family of his wife, who was part of the Dauvissat wine family.

The domaine holds 9.29 hectares of vineyard land planted entirely with Chardonnay grapevines, in Chablis. The wines are harvested entirely by hand. Raveneau is one of only five estates in Chablis to still use this method.

No new oak barrels are used to make the wines. The wines are fermented in stainless steel and then aged in barrels with an average age of seven to eight years, for twelve to eighteen months.

Raveneau owns sections of three Chablis Grand cru vineyards. These are in Les Clos, Blanchots and Valmur.

More land is owned within six Chablis Premier cru vineyards. The largest holding is Montée de Tonnerre and Butteaux.

In 2003 the size of the vathouse was increased from 600m² to 1200m². There are now three stories to the building.

DOMAINE DUJAC

Jacques Seysses started Domaine Dujac in 1968. He was not born in Burgundy, but winemaking is his true vocation. His love for wine comes from his father, a gourmet with a passion for fine wines. Even as a young boy, Jacques would meet the greatest winegrowers of the time in the company of his father.

At the age of 25, after a few years working for the family-owned biscuit manufacturing company, he decided to move on from the business world. During the 1966 and 1967 harvests, he learned winemaking with Gérard Potel at the Domaine de la Pousse d'Or in Volnay. In 1968, he bought the Domaine Graillet in Morey-Saint-Denis, which he renamed Domaine Dujac

DOMAINE PONSOT

Vineyard Brands has a 40-plus year history of buying wines from Domaine Ponsot - first from Hippolyte Ponsot and then from his son Jean-Marie and more recently from Laurent and his sister Rose-Marie.

In 1872, William Ponsot purchased a wine estate in Morey-Saint-Denis and set-up his home there. His major parcels of land at that time were the Clos des Monts-Luisants and Clos de la Roche. His nephew and godson, Hippolyte Ponsot, took over the Domaine in 1920 after completing his career as a diplomat. In 1932, he started bottling his entire harvest at the Domaine, which was a rarity in that time.

Throughout the 1940s, his son Jean-Marie farmed the vineyards and made wine in collaboration with him. He took over when Hippolyte retired in 1957.

Laurent Ponsot started working with his father Jean-Marie on the family estate in 1981 and became its manager together with his sister Rose-Marie Ponsot. He set up a new sales system, diversified the sale of all bottled production, and made wines with an emphasis on total authenticity.

In 1997, the siblings took over the management of the estate. Laurent was responsible for the day to day running of the domaine until he stepped down in 2017 to concentrate on personal ventures.

The company Laurent Ponsot is neither a "domain" nor a "maison": it's a state of mind.

MAISON CAMILLE GIROUD

Founded in 1865, Maison Camille Giroud began as a specialist négociant. They had a few hectares of their own vines, but the vast majority of their wines were purchased from top-ranked growers across the region. They'd then age these wines in their cellars until they reached peak maturity; sometimes decades later.

In 2001, Giroud was purchased by a consortium, counting Napa Valley winery owner Ann Colgin and a number of wine investors as members. They wished to retain the distinctive business model of the maison as well as developing their terroir-driven approach with new, modern techniques. They brought in young winemaker David Croix and undertook a major revamping of the winery.

EDOUARD DELAUNAY

Laurent Delaunay, representing the fifth generation of a family of winemakers and negociants, is reappropriating his family's history.

Thought it had progressively been sinking into oblivion over the last several years, the House of Edouard Delaunay, an old structure with a rich and unique history, has always been closely connected to Burgundy wine trade and was considerably implicated in the epic intercontinental expansion it experienced throughout the entire 20th century.

Bought back in 2017 by Laurent Delaunay, the great grandson of the founder, it strives to regain its place within the inner circle of the great houses of Burgundy through the meticulous and precise vinification and ageing of exceptional wines from some of Burgundy's finest terroirs.

DOMAINE DE L'ENCLOS

Romain and Damien Bouchard grew up in their father's winery working alongside him from a very young age. In 2005, with the purchase of the tiny defunct Domaine de la Grande Chaume comprising 3.38 hectares of vines, the brothers started making their own certified organic Chablis in a small corner of their dad's big modern winery.

Ten years later Pascal Bouchard sold the business he had spent his lifetime building, passing along his vineyards and the proceeds of the sale to his two sons who were now displaced without a winery or any equipment.

The Bouchard brothers took two years away from winemaking to create a brand new Domaine that would be everything they had always dreamed of.

Although, for over a century the Estate has been an established element of Burgundian history, its origins can be traced back to the south-west of France, and more specifically to the Tarn and Garonne.

It fact it was in Valence-sur-Agen that Jules Joseph Barthélémy Lafon was born on March 29th, 1864. His father, Charles Lafon was Land Registrar in the area and later in the Pyrenees.

Described as 'brilliant' by his professors, Jules completed his studies and joined the Public Registry Office where he was promoted to Inspector in 1887.

DOMAINE JEAN DAUVISSAT

The domaine is spread over 53 parcels of vines, extending over 22 hectares and 7 communes. This scattered division of their land helps to produce wines that are fully representative of the Chablis vineyards, and notably, to benefit from the specific characteristics of the two banks of the Serein river valley.

Let the terroir express itself, and preserve it... is what they called it! This is the thought that drives all their interventions, from the first cut of the secateurs to the final stage of bottling. They will only intervene in the vines to help the plants produce the best they can.

It's with this spirit that we aim for reasonable yields, using targeted pruning, a closely controlled debudding and an organical fertilisation reduced to what is strictly needed.

They have grown more and more towards organical viticulture for the simple reason that we can't see ourselves working differently. No weed killers or insecticides have been used since 2011. Biodynamics have found their way into our work since 2018, as a way to keep our soils and vines healthy.

By working the soils, shredding vine shoots, using seeds for a winter vegetation cover and using cow manure composting we can preserve the balance and structure of those soils.

MAISON CHAMPY

Maison Champy is the oldest wine company in Burgundy boasting a history dating back to 1720. The winery, which has been declared a historic monument by UNESCO, was designed by the famed architect, Gustave Eiffel and sits above an ancient 15th-century Jacobin monk cellar, where the wines are aged in the heart of Beaune.

It was at Maison Champy where renowned scientist, Louis Pasteur set up a laboratory and developed the pasteurization method. When Pasteur published his findings, he gave special thanks to fourth-generation Beaune wine merchant, Claude Champy. Pasteur's laboratory equipment can still be seen today when visiting the Maison.

RHÔNE

The Rhône wine region in Southern France is situated in the Rhône river valley and produces numerous wines under various Appellation d'origine contrôlée designations. The region's major appellation in production volume is Côtes du Rhône.

The Rhône is generally divided into two sub-regions with distinct viticultural traditions, the Northern Rhône (referred to in French as Rhône septentrional) and the Southern Rhône (in French Rhône méridional). The northern sub-region produces red wines from the Syrah grape, sometimes blended with white wine grapes, and white wines from Marsanne, Roussane and Viognier grapes. The southern sub-region produces an array of red, white and rosé wines, often blends of several grapes such as in Châteauneuf-du-Pape.

The northern Rhône is characterised by a continental climate with harsh winters but warm summers. Its climate is influenced by the mistral wind, which brings colder air from the Massif Central. Northern Rhône is therefore cooler than southern Rhône, which means that the mix of planted grape varieties and wine styles are slightly different.

The southern Rhône sub-region has a more Mediterranean climate with milder winters and hot summers. The differing terroirs, together with the rugged landscape, which partly protects the valleys from the Mistral, produce microclimates which give rise to a wide diversity of wines.

CHATEAU RAYAS

Rayas is one the legendary properties from Chateauneuf du Pape. Great terroir, with poor, red, sandy soils, low yields and they are usually one of the last properties to harvest.

Of the 23 hectares of vineyards Rayas owns, only 12 are under vine. Of those hectares, two are dedicated to white wine grape varieties. Their vines are planted on deep layers of sand. Very few stones are found littering the landscape. Those poor soils are a big part of what goes into the singular character found in their wines.

DOMAINE GEORGES VERNAY

A pioneer in the renewal of the Condrieu appellation, Domaine Georges Vernay has always produced wines of unique style, notable for their finesse, elegance and harmony. The property has become a major emblem of Rhone Valley winegrowing, from the time when Georges Vernay saved the Condrieu appellation to the international awards earned by Christine Vernay's Côte-Rôtie. Three generations have left the mark of their philosophy on the estate, while perpetuating its traditions with the greatest respect for both vines and winegrowers.

DOMAINE JAMET

Brothers Jean-Paul and Jean-Luc Jamet are widely regarded as being among the very, very best producers of Cote Rotie. The house style is very traditional with only a small amount of new oak being used to preserve the character of the fruit and the terroir.

The brothers farm 6 hectares of Syrah—they do not own any Viognier—spilt among tiny parcels across the appellation. The main focus of production is the Cote Rotie, although they also produce a tiny amount of brilliant Cotes du Rhone from declassified grapes and, in exceptional years, an outstanding Cote Brune.

DOMAINE CLAPE

In the world of wine, there are many good winegrowers. However, there are only a handful who are truly great—Auguste Clape is among these select few. Critics and connoisseurs alike all agree that he is one of the greatest pioneers of the Northern Rhône, and his Syrahs from the cru of Cornas are among the most celebrated wines of France. The Clapes have been vigneron for many generations, but the infamous grower strikes of 1906 and 1907 forced his grandfather out of the Languedoc and into the Northern Rhône to start anew from practically nothing. The Clapes rebuilt their fortunes, terrace-by-terrace, along the steep, western slopes of the Rhône River. For many years, the majority of growers in Cornas sold their fruit to négociants. Auguste was the first to bottle his own wine, which eventually paved the way for such contemporary superstars as Thierry Allemand. Without pretense or fanfare, Auguste, the former mayor of Cornas, is a stately picture of grace and magnanimity—a no-nonsense, wise man who is still interested in learning. Today, he works side-by-side with his son, Pierre-Marie, and grandson, Olivier.

JEAN-LOUIS CHAVE

The Chave family is the most famous vine grower on the hill of Hermitage. The history of winemaking in the family dates back to 1481, and since then responsibility has moved continuously from father to son without interruption. Chave owns around 14 hectares of vines around the hill of Hermitage, from nine different vineyards, but produces only three different wines, as the tradition in Hermitage is to blend wines from different vineyards.

ALAIN GRAILLOT

Alain Graillot founded his domaine in Crozes-Hermitage in 1985, and rapidly became one of the most in-demand producers in the Northern Rhone for his exuberant, robust, and complete Syrah-based wines. Alain owns 50 acres of 30-year-old Crozes-Hermitage vines on the flat alluvial plain between the Rhône and Isère rivers, in well-draining soils of sand, gravel, and stone. He also has two tiny parcels in St. Joseph, from which he makes a slightly fresher, more early-drinking wine than the remarkable Crozes-Hermitage that constitutes the majority of his production.

E. GUIGAL

The Guigal domain was founded in 1946 by Etienne Guigal in Ampuis; a small, ancient village at the heart of the Côte-Rôtie appellation. It is overlooked by unique vineyards where vines and wine have been celebrated for over 2,400 years. Following his arrival in 1924 at the age of 14, the founder went on to make wine for 67 vintages in the Côte-Rôtie.

In 1961, a still very young Marcel Guigal took over management of the domain when his father was struck by temporary but total blindness. He was joined in 1973 by his wife, Bernadette and they worked hand-in-hand to expand the family business.

In 1975, their son Philippe was born and today he is the domain's oenologist. Together with his wife, Eve, he represents the third generation and continues the family's lifetime endeavour to be at the service of the greatest wines of the Rhône valley.

CHÂTEAU DE BEAUCASTEL

Legend tells that in 1321, under the reign of Pope Jean XXII, four barrels were bought from the papal cellar to be filled with wine in Châteauneuf. So pleased were the papal congregation with the wine that they planted new vines, and thus many châteaux in the region were born.

Château de Beaucastel has gone from strength to strength since the Perrin family took ownership, and the fact that the vineyard has produced such extraordinarily good harvests over the years that the family felt compelled to create a special cuvee is a testament to the estate's distinction in the region. After all, Beaucastel is one of only three vineyards in the area to plant and vinify all thirteen grape varieties permitted under Châteauneuf du Pape appellation regulations.

In 2006, the Perrin family and the château joined Primum Familiae Vini, an association of a limited number of high-end family-owned wineries, and starting with the 2009 vintage, Beaucastel became one of the first wines outside of Bordeaux to be sold on the Place de Bordeaux by Bordeaux negociants.

BORDEAUX

The vine was introduced to the Bordeaux region by the Romans, probably in the mid-1st century, to provide wine for local consumption, and wine production has been continuous in the region since then.

Bordeaux now has about 125,000 hectares of vineyards, 57 appellations, 10,000 wine-producing châteaux and 13,000 grape growers. With an annual production of approximately 960 million bottles, Bordeaux produces large quantities of everyday wine as well as some of the most expensive wines in the world.

Both red and white wines are produced in Bordeaux. Red Bordeaux is called claret in the UK. Red wines are generally made from a blend of grapes, and may be made from Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Cabernet Franc, Petit verdot, Malbec, and, less commonly in recent years, Carménère. White Bordeaux is made from Sauvignon blanc, Sémillon, and Muscadelle. Sauternes is a subregion of Graves known for its intensely sweet, white, dessert wines such as Château d'Yquem.

Although Bordeaux's climate is usually classified as an oceanic climate, the summers tend to be warmer and the winters milder than most areas of similar classification. Substantial summer rainfall prevents its climate from being classified as Mediterranean.

VIEUX CHÂTEAU CERTAN

In its formative years, the wine of Vieux Chateau Certan was considered to be among the top, if not the best wine of Pomerol. The more things change, the more they stay the same as Vieux Chateau Certan is once again considered one of the best wines of Pomerol.

CHÂTEAU SÉGUR DE CABANAC

Château Ségur de Cabanac takes its name from the illustrious and powerful family of the same name of which we find traces from the sixteenth century and which contributed to the development of the Médoc vineyards including that of Saint-Estèphe.

Its vineyard of 7 hectares is located to the east of the town and faces the Gironde estuary. The vine with an average age of 30 years is planted on one of the best gravelly croupes of the appellation. Composed of 60% Cabernet Sauvignon and 40% Merlot, this Saint-Estèphe combines a powerful structure allowing it to age

CHÂTEAU HAUT-BAILLY

Château Haut-Bailly's proud position tells a tale of enduring good fortune, perched atop the gentle slopes of Bordeaux's historic Graves region.

Ancient archives prove that from as early as 1461 these lands were already recognised as excellent for the cultivation of vines. Centuries of commitment and unwavering conviction have established Haut-Bailly as a visionary estate, but one which also possesses a wealth of memories.

CHÂTEAU GUADET

When the French Revolution broke out in 1789, Élie Guadet, from a family of Girondin magistrates, had already acquired a solid reputation as a litigant in Bordeaux. Appointed administrator of the department of Gironde in 1790 then president of the criminal court of Bordeaux, he was elected the same year deputy of Gironde in the Legislative Assembly.

With Gensonné and Vergniaud, he will be one of the founders of the political group of the Girondins. He presided over the National Assembly from January 22 to February 5, 1792 and chaired the National Convention from October 18 to November 1, 1792.

Pursued during the French Revolution, he found refuge in the cellars running under the properties and was guillotined along with his family in 1794.

CHÂTEAU CLOS FOURTET

Clos Fourtet did not start out as a vineyard. Even with its picture-perfect terroir, Clos Fourtet, due to its proximity to the Saint Emilion village was built for use as a defensive fort called Camfourtet during the middle ages. Camfourtet can be loosely translated to Camp Fort. Vines first appeared here in the mid to late 1600s.

In the late 18th century, the property was owned by Elie de Carle, who also owned Chateau Figeac at the same time. The chateau on the property today was constructed by the Rulleau family. The Rulleau's were also responsible for evolving the name from Camfourtet to Clos Fourtet in 1868.

The first part of the modern era of Clos Fourtet begins in 1919 when it was purchased by Fernand Ginestet. The powerful Ginestet family owned several vineyards and they were also successful negociants. The Ginestet family eventually sold Clos Fourtet to raise money for their purchase of Chateau Margaux in 1949.

In a convoluted, three-way transaction, Clos Fourtet passed to the Lurton family. In fact, Pierre Lurton, who is now in charge of Chateau Cheval Blanc managed Clos Fourtet until 1991. The Ginestet family sold Clos Fourtet in 2001 to the current owners, the Cuvelier family.

CHÂTEAU SOCIANDO-MALLET

Situated on what was in 1633 the residence of a Basque nobleman named Sièvre Sociando, the first documentation of the estate mentions its nobles terres. Sociando-Mallet was a forgotten and derelict property of vastly reduced land by the time it was bought by Jean Gautreau, a négociant from Lesparre, in 1969. The estate has since seen considerable expansion and modernisation.

CHÂTEAU PHÉLAN SÉGUR

It was not by chance that Bernard O'Phelan (1770-1841), a young Irish wine merchant, left his native town of Tipperary at the end of the 18th century to set himself up in Bordeaux. The town at this time was an important trading hub with the British Isles. Close relations were built up between the families that bought and sold the wines of the region from one another.

These links were such that they led to alliances and even marriages, in particular that of Bernard Phélan with one of the daughters of Daniel Guestier, a well-known merchant in the Bordeaux wine market. Helped by the experience of his father-in-law, he could now envisage producing his own wines.

Four families and more than two centuries of passion, respect for the terroir and innovation in the service of a great name.

After more than thirty years in charge of the property, the Gardinier family has decided to pass on the reins to Philippe Van de Vyvere. For this great wine enthusiast, taking over this prestigious growth is the fulfilment of one of his most cherished Dreams.

The daughter of Edouard Mialhe, May Eliane de Lencquesaing (born in 1926) later became the owner and manager of the property. In 2006, de Lencquesaing sold a majority interest in the Château to the Rouzaud family, which also owns the Champagne house Louis Roederer

CHÂTEAU ORMES DE PEZ

In around 1880, Marie Cazes married Jean Guillou, the Ormes de Pez Cellar Master. He was sadly killed at the very beginning of the Great War and so Marie, a woman of great character, subsequently took over the business. Her brother Jean-Charles Cazes purchased Ormes de Pez in 1940.

Jean-Michel Cazes later redeveloped and modernised the traditional XVIII century buildings in the early 80's.

They are made of predominantly Cabernet Sauvignon and complemented by a significant amount of Merlot for a combination of longevity and smoothness. The resulting wines are rich and fruity with a rather imposing tannic backbone.

CHÂTEAU COS D'ESTOURNEL

Born in 1762 during the reign of Louis XV and died in 1853 under Napoleon III, at the remarkable age of 91, Louis Gaspard d'Estournel had one sole passion: Cos.

Having inherited a few vines near the village of Cos, he recognized, in 1811, the quality of their wine and decided to vinify them separately.

Very rapidly, Cos d'Estournel's wine exceeded the prices of the most prestigious wines and was exported as far as India.

Château Cos d'Estournel has belonged to Michel Reybier since 2000. Mr Reybier's objective has been to uphold the château's high standards and constant quest for excellence while at the same time continuing the avant-garde style initiated by Louis Gaspard d'Estournel.

Ducru-Beaucaillou's 50 hectares of vineyards (Cabernet Sauvignon 65%, Merlot 25%, Cabernet Franc 5% and Petit Verdot 5%) lie on deep, large-stone gravel beds enriched with alluvial soil deposits and with a high clay content. CHÂTEAU PETRUS

The most expensive wine in all of Bordeaux had a very humble beginning. Compared to the top Bordeaux wines in the Medoc, it's also a relatively new producer. Especially in the high priced Bordeaux wine category.

In fact, until 1982, while Petrus was not cheap, it was not that much money when compared to the other top wines of Bordeaux. It sold for about the same price as the First Growths in those days. Step back a decade to the 1970's and Petrus sold for less than the First Growths. And if you really want to take a look back to the middle of the 19th century, the vineyards of Petrus were not even thought of as being worthy of making great wine! It was considered a luncheon claret, not fit for the dinner table!

CHÂTEAU MOUTON-ROTHSCHILD

The Bordeaux Wine Official Classification of 1855 was based entirely on recent market prices for a vineyard's wines, with one exception: Château Mouton Rothschild. Despite the market prices for their vineyard's wines equalling that of Château Lafite Rothschild, Château Mouton Rothschild was excluded from First Great Growth status, an act that Baron Philippe de Rothschild referred to as "the monstrous injustice".

In 1973, Mouton was elevated to "first growth" status after decades of intense lobbying by its powerful and influential owner, the only change in the original 1855 classification (excepting the 1856 addition of Château Cantemerle). This prompted a change of motto: previously, the motto of the wine was Premier ne puis, second ne daigne, Mouton suis. ("First, I cannot be. Second, I do not deign to be. Mouton I am."), and it was changed to Premier je suis, Second je fus, Mouton ne change. ("First, I am. Second, I used to be. Mouton does not change.")

CHÂTEAU MARGAUX

Since the 16th century, It's difficult to summarise in a few lines, the long and passionate history of the estate, it could be entitled "Once upon a time Château Margaux".

Through the generations and through the centuries, the skillfulness of one and the innovations of others, progressively made Château Margaux into a wine of excellence; They only have to remember the progress made by Steward Berlon at the very beginning of the XVIII century.

Château Margaux's history and renown stem equally from the intrinsic genius of the place as from the contributions made by the various people who have served it for five centuries. But there has probably not been an owner who has played such a decisive role, in such a short time, as André Mentzelopoulos, who purchased the Estate in 1977.

Chateau Clarke dates back to the late 1700s when it was founded by Tony Clarke, which following the custom of the time, took its name from the estate's founder, or current owner.

The vineyard has only changed hands two more times over the centuries. In 1820, the St. Guirons family bought the property and it remained in their hands until 1973 when Chateau Clarke was purchased by Baron Edmond de Rothschild.

CHÂTEAU LAFITE ROTHSCHILD

While the first known reference to Lafite dates to 1234 with a certain Gombaude de Lafite, abbot of the Vertheuil Monastery north of Pauillac, Lafite's mention as a medieval fief dates to the 14th century.

The name Lafite comes from the Gascon language term "la hite", which means "hillock". There were probably already vineyards on the property at the time when the Ségur family organised the vineyard in the 17th century, and Lafite began to earn its reputation as a great winemaking estate.

Jacques de Ségur was credited with the planting of the Lafite vineyard in the 1670s and in the early 1680s. In 1695, Jacques de Ségur's heir, Alexandre, married the heiress of Château Latour, who gave birth to Nicolas-Alexandre de Ségur. The wine histories of the fiefs of Lafite and Latour were thus joined at the outset.

CHÂTEAU PALMER

Found in the village of Margaux, the wine produced here was classified as one of fourteen Troisièmes Crus in the historic Bordeaux Wine Official Classification of 1855. The property is situated in the communes of Margaux and Cantenac, and its wine is considered to be one of the two most popular Third Growths.

Since 1998, the Château has been producing a second label, not a second wine, Alter Ego de Palmer, selected from the same quality terroirs, but employing different wine-making techniques and different proportions of grapes. In order to produce an earlier-drinking wine. Some 40% of the estate's production is now sold as Alter Ego de Palmer. The result has been a significant reduction in the quantity of wine sold as Château Palmer (from nearly 20,000 cases before the introduction of Alter Ego de Palmer to 11,000–12,000 cases currently). The previous second wine, La Réserve de Général, is not a component of Alter Ego de Palmer, but is now sold off in bulk.

CHÂTEAU CANTENAC-BROWN

The Chateau for Cantenac Brown is unique in the Bordeaux wine appellation. It is perhaps the only Bordeaux chateau designed in the style of a traditional, Tudor mansion in the entire region!

At the start of the 19th century, the well-known Scottish, animal painter, John Lewis Brown purchased the estate. It was John Lewis Brown that drew up the plans and designed the ostentatious chateau in the Tudor style. While beautiful, it stands out, due to its unique design which includes 370 windows and doors.

More recently, in 1989 AXA, the massive insurance company with several Bordeaux chateaux in their portfolio including Pichon Baron in Pauillac, and estates in Pomerol and Sauternes bought the vineyard. AXA sold the property in 2006 to the Halabi family.

One of the first moves made by the new owners was to place Jose Sanfins in charge of the winemaking at Cantenac Brown. Under the direction of Jose Sanfins, the level of quality has continued to improve since 2009, followed by 2010 and 2015 as benchmark vintages for the chateau.

CHÂTEAU ANGLUDET

Home to the Sichel family since 1961, Château Angludet is one of the oldest properties in the Médoc, with a history which goes back to the twelfth century. It is named after Bertrand d'Angludet, a knight and lord of the noble residence which stood on this site in 1150.

Since 1758, the vineyard of Château Angludet has retained a configuration down the centuries which is very close to the original, 93 percent of the current surface area having nurtured vines for more than 250 years – exceptional continuity for a vineyard.

Managed today by Benjamin Sichel, the vineyard of Château Angludet covers a surface area of 32 hectares, all within the AOC Margaux winegrowing area and planted with 46 percent Cabernet Sauvignon, 41 percent Merlot and 13 percent Petit Verdot. The relatively large proportion of Petit Verdot demands hard work but imparts depth and richness to the wine.

CHÂTEAU LE PIN

Since 1924, what we know of as Chateau Le Pin had been the property of the Loubie family. The grapes were sold or blended to produce other fine, but undistinguished Pomerol wines until 1978.

The minuscule 2.7-hectare vineyard of Le Pin is planted to almost 100% Merlot.

The terroir of Le Pin is clay with gravel and sand with deposits of iron oxide in the soil. The gravel is deep. In some parts of the vineyard, the gravel is close to 3 meters thick. The vineyard is ideally placed with good elevation on the Pomerol plateau.

Situated near the Catusseau village, the vines average close to 35 years of age. However, they have old vines as well that date to the 1950s. The vineyard of Le Pin is planted to a vine density of 6,000 vines per hectare.

Le Pin was probably the first chateau in all of Bordeaux to conduct malolactic fermentation in barrels. Interestingly, this was by accident and not by design. Le Pin produces between 400 and 600 cases per year. The wine of Le Pin is vinified in 7 small, stainless steel tanks that range in size from 15 hectoliters up to 42 hectoliters. In the cellars, all wine is moved by gravity. Malolactic fermentation takes place in new oak.

DOMAINE GUIBERTEAU

In 1996, at the end of a lease cycle, Romain Guiberteau, who was flailing as a law student, decided to take over the management of his family's vineyards rather than see the leases renewed. The following year, under the mentoring of Clos Rougeard's Nady Foucault, Romain made 5000 bottles of red wine that he managed to sell easily. The success convinced him to pursue a qualitative approach to winemaking and to gradually take back his grapes from the cooperative.

In only a few years, Domaine Guiberteau has become one of the most sought after domaines in Saumur, their wines already stringently allocated and found in the best restaurants in France and Finland!

DOMAINE DIDIER DAGUENEAU

Domaine Didier Dagueneau is based in the small village of Saint-Andelain in the heart of the Pouilly-Fumé appellation and is the source of some of the most singular wines of the world.

A true rebel, Didier Dagueneau decided to establish his own Domaine rather than join the family estate. He acquired his first parcel and began to vinify in 1982. Inspired by the work of Edmond Vatan in Sancerre and Henri Jayer in Burgundy, Dagueneau was one of the first growers in Loire to experiment with single-parcel wines, starting with En Chailloux in 1982 and later with the cuvée Pur Sang in 1988.

After establishing his wines at the very top of the Pouilly-Fumé appellation, Didier Dagueneau further grew the estate by acquiring vines in the thought after vineyard of Monts Damnés in Sancerre in 2000, and in Jurançon in 2002.

DOMAINE CAZES

Maison Cazes, located in Rivesaltes, in the heart of the Roussillon region, between the Pyrenees Mountains and the Mediterranean Sea, was founded by Michel Cazes in 1895.

1927 Michel's son, Aimé, convinced his father to buy Mas Joffre, a farmhouse that once belonged to Maréchal Joseph Joffre, the French First World War hero and native of the area.

1955 Over the years, the domaine acquired neighboring parcels of land and, by the 1950s, it extended over 40 hectares. The first bottles of Cazes wine appeared in 1955, at the instigation of André, the eldest of Aimé's two sons.

In 1971 Aimé's sons, André and Bernard, took over the running of the domaine. André was responsible for sales and Bernard managed operations on the domaine, which already covered 60 hectares.

In 1997 When Bernard's son, Emmanuel, joined the business, the domaine started its conversion to organic and biodynamic growing. Since 2004 Lionel Lavail the son of a local wine producer took the direction of Maison Cazes and 2005 The entire domaine became a certified Organic and Biodynamic estate.

ITALY

Italy is home of the oldest wine-producing regions in the world, and Italian wines are known worldwide for their broad variety. Italy, closely followed by France, is the world's largest wine producer by volume. Its contribution is about 45–50 million hl per year, and represents about one-third of global production. Italian wine is exported around the world and is also extremely popular in Italy: Italians rank fifth on the world wine consumption list by volume, with 42 litres per capita consumption. Grapes are grown in almost every region of the country and there are more than one million vineyards under cultivation.

Etruscans and Greek settlers produced wine in Italy before the Romans started their own vineyards in the 2nd century B.C. Roman grape-growing and winemaking was prolific and well-organized, pioneering large-scale production and storage techniques like barrel-making and bottling.

Italy's twenty wine regions correspond to the twenty administrative regions. Understanding of Italian wine becomes clearer with an understanding of the differences between each region; their cuisines reflect their indigenous wines, and vice-versa. The 73 DOCG wines are located in 15 different regions, but most of them are concentrated in Piedmont, Veneto and Tuscany.

PIEMONTE

The province of Piedmont is in the northwestern corner of Italy. The best-known wines from the region include Barolo and Barbaresco. They are made from the Nebbiolo grape. These wines are ideal for storage and a well-aged Barolo, for instance, may leave a feeling of drinking velvet because the tannins are polished and integrated more and more into the wine. As the wine matures the colour becomes more brownish and rust-red.

While Turin is the capital of Piedmont, Alba and Asti are at the heart of the region's wine industry. The wine making industry of Piedmont played a significant role in the early stages of the Risorgimento with some of the era's most prominent figures, such as Camillo Benso, conte di Cavour and Giuseppe Garibaldi owning vineyards in the Piedmont region and making significant contributions to the development of Piedmontese wines. The excessively high tariffs imposed by the Austrian Empire on the export of Piedmontese wines to Austrian controlled areas of northern Italy was one of the underlying sparks to the revolutions of 1848–1849.

Piedmont produces more DOC/G wines by volume than any other Italian wine region with nearly 84% of all the area's wine production falling under a DOC/G designation.

ALDO CONTERNO

Aldo Conterno (1931–2012) was an Italian winemaker of eponymous wine producer Poderi Aldo Conterno from the Piemonte region in the district of Langhe, chiefly producing Barolo wines. The winery is located in Monforte d'Alba, and Conterno was widely ranked among Piemonte's foremost producers.

Among Barolo aficionados the wines of Aldo Conterno have earned a reputation for being "modernist" but with a blend of traditional Barolo winemaking practices. Like many traditional Barolo makers, Conterno favoured long aging of his wines prior to its release to the public.

Poderi Aldo Conterno owns around 25 hectares of vineyard land in Bussia Soprana, about 400 metres above sea level. The estimated average production is 140,000 to 150,000 bottles per year.

LA SPINETTA

Bruno, Carlo and Giorgio Rivetti are the three brothers behind the famed La Spinetta estate, which was founded by their parents in 1977. La Spinetta has become a modern Italian superstar winery, producing some of Piemonte's most delicious wines at their main estate in Castagnole Lanze and their newer 'Campè' estate (acquired in 2000) in Grinzane Cavour.

Enologist Stephane Mazzetta, who settled in at La Spinetta several years ago after working at other top Langhe wineries, implements and oversees the work in La Spinetta's stunning, first-class cellars that handle grapes from 100 hectares of vineyards. Three Barbarescos—Gallina, Valeirano and Staderi—are produced as well as a single Barolo, a Moscato Passito called 'Oro,' and several others.

After vinification, all the wines are aged in 100% new French oak barriques. The barrique effect does not mask the fruit and allows the underlying Piemontese pedigree to shine through.

MASCARELLO GIUSEPPE É FIGLIO

The members of the Giuseppe Mascarello family have been growing wines for more than a century and a half, first as farmers running the Manescotto estate in the village of La Morra for the marchesa Giulia Colbert Faletti di Barolo, and then on their own property since the late 1800s

In 1980 they assumed direct responsibility for the family's MONPRIVATO vineyard, continuing to run it with the same philosophy: application of the techniques that have always been followed to obtain the highest quality of "grape raw material" from every point of view.

GIACOMO BORGOGNO E FIGLI

The name Borgogno is connected to one of the oldest wineries in Piedmont: in fact, in 1761 with Bartholomew Borgogno. In 1848 he became the supplier of the College for the sons of Army officers of Savoy Racconigi with the first written document on legal paper, still jealously preserved, demonstrating the company's business and is of great importance in recent history. The proof is the choice of its Barolo, in 1861, for the official dinner celebrating the unification of Italy!

Today Borgogno James & Sons is a company that evolved through the centuries-old experience, combines tradition and technological innovation in the relationship, such as to ensure the continued achievement of a higher quality in their products.

ROMANO DAL FORNO

The Dal Forno family has been making wine since 1983. Located in Val D'Ilasi, the estate consists of 65 acres of vines planted to traditional indigenous varieties of Corvina, Corvinone, Rondinella, Oseleta and Croatina. The estate vineyards and farm are located where the slopes begin to rise toward the mountains and sit 1,000 feet above sea level.

The loose, alluvial soils, meticulous pruning and scrupulous viticultural techniques ensure remarkable-quality grapes. The Dal Fornos use traditional methods to grow the finest fruit, and then employ modern techniques to produce the best wines — classic in expression and modern in purity.

Dal Forno Romano is well-known for a number of superior wines that range from the region's famous Valpolicella and Amarone to unique bottlings such as Vigne Seré, a passito dessert-style wine.

MASSETO

Masseto is without doubt one of the most beautiful Merlots in the world. Since the first vintage in 1987, this wine has gathered a large following of fans. Besides the hill with the distinctive blue clay soil, there is another element that is an essential factor in the terroir of Masseto; the Tyrrhenian Sea. It is only 10 kilometers away from the vineyards. In summer, the water reflects the sunrays, which indirectly gives the vines even more sun. On top of that, the sea provides a subtle, but cooling breeze. The tempering effect of the breeze causes the ripening process to slow down and take longer, resulting in the perfect balance between tannins and acidity.

VINA ERRAZURIZ

Don Maximiano Errázuriz founded Viña Errázuriz in 1870. With his great vision for the future and his innovative, pioneering spirit, he planted the first French grape varieties in the Aconcagua Valley. His initiative and creativity were handed down to future generations and, in just over a century, his descendants consolidated the winery and positioned their wines among the world's most noteworthy.

PENFOLDS

The success of Penfolds has been driven by the generations of visionaries and innovators. From the beginning in 1844 to today, the merging of science, art and innovation has driven Penfolds to become one of Australia's most famed and respected winemakers.

After the success of early sherries and fortified wines, founders Dr Christopher and Mary Penfold planted their vine cuttings they had carried on their voyage over to Australia. In 1844 the fledging vineyard was officially established as the Penfolds wine company at Magill Estate.

In 1948, history was made again as Max Schubert became the company's first Chief Winemaker. A loyal company man and true innovator, Schubert would propel Penfolds onto the global stage with his experimentation of long-lasting wines - the creation of Penfolds Grange in the 1950s

RIDGE VINEYARDS

Ridge Vineyards makes wines that compete in terms of quality and desirability with Bordeaux First Growths and Grand Cru White Burgundies. Winemaker Paul Draper has crafted 43 vintages at Ridge and his practical, hands-off approach to winemaking has resulted in an exceptional and highly sought-after range of wines.

Although a vineyard was first planted near the top of Monte Bello Ridge in the Santa Cruz Mountains in 1885, it lay abandoned until four Stanford Research Institute engineers bought it in 1959. Ridge Vineyards was formed in 1962 and Paul Draper was appointed as winemaker in 1969. After stunning the world by their triumph in the 1976 Judgement of Paris tasting, Ridge Vineyards shot to fame and gained cult status almost overnight.

Since then, Ridge has concentrated on producing fine Bordeaux blends and Chardonnays from Monte Bello's exalted terroir as well as renowned Zinfandels from the Lytton Springs and Geyserville vineyards in Sonoma County.

Located in the villages of Adong, Xidang, Sinong and Shuori at the foot of the sacred Meili mountain, Ao Yun vineyards range in altitude from 2,200 to 2,600 meters, enabling the cabernet sauvignon grape to express the full refinement of this unique terroir.

GERMANY

EGON MÜLLER

The Egon Müller estate has been in the hands of the Müller family since 1797.

Egon Müller's wines are all made using estate-grown fruit from two parcels: 8.3 hectares of Scharzhof and 4 hectares of Le Gallais. The Scharzhofberg, or Scharzhof Mountain, is among the finest Riesling sites in Germany and is considered Grand Cru. As such, it is allowed to be labeled with its vineyard name, or "Einzellage", rather than its village name. The Müller holdings here include a parcel of un-grafted vines that were planted in the 19th century. These wines deliver at the highest level of quality and are without question among the world's great wines.

MASSANDRA WINERY

The Crimean oldest winery Massandra has been producing fine wines for more than 110 years and has won international acclaim for their exceptional quality.

The winery was built in 1894 – 1897 near Yalta, Crimea. Its long tunnels run deep into the granite of the mountains, ensure the perfect low temperature necessary for wine as it ages in oak casks and vats.

The subtropical air climate of the region and the protective shields of mountain chains create unique conditions for the production of high quality fortified and dessert wines, which combined with the extraordinary architectural merit of the cellars, have earned Massandra a position as one of Russia's nationally important sites.
