ALDE

At Alde farm in Hardanger, apples have been grown since the fruit first arrived in the fjord. The name originated centuries ago in a time when the fruit was known as Alde.

On our slopes we grow varieties such as Gravenstein, Discovery Summerred and Aroma due to their distinctive characters, perfect for making cider. The varieties are perfectly suited for all of them can contribute with their own character.

The must ferments in steel tanks, where temperature is under close supervision. In this way, the ciders develop smoothly and in a controlled manner while retaining the apple aroma. When most of the fructose has been converted, the ciders have acquired the dry taste I'm looking for, well balanced between acidity and sweetness. Each variety is fermented separately and carefully mixed to yield the characteristic fruit and fresh flavor that the Alde cider has.
